Jack Bowman is the Director of Financial Planning and Education at Fintent Invest, as well as an Investment Adviser Representative licensed in California. He brings a strong and growing presence in the investment and financial media landscape, with experience spanning advisory work, market analysis, and investor education.

Formerly an economics, history, and psychology teacher at Daily High School in Glendale, Jack utilizes the skills he picked up in the classroom in his work at Fintent Invest, distilling sophisticated strategies and products for individuals so they can make the best, most informed decisions for themselves and their families.

Jack began his career in finance in 2021, working with clients in a family office-style environment. Alongside his advisory work, he has become a well-known voice in markets and macroeconomics—publishing over 600 articles and contributing regularly to platforms like Seeking Alpha, where his work has generated millions of views and built a following of more than 10,000 investors. He is also a frequent guest across investing podcasts and media interviews, offering timely insights on market trends, macroeconomic shifts, and portfolio strategy.

Jack specializes in translating complex financial concepts into clear, actionable insights for Fintent Invest's clients. His focus is to help individuals and families better understand their financial lives—turning sophisticated strategies into practical guidance that supports confident, informed decision-making.
